Morning Oregonian.

DAILY
THE UNION

GENERAL EASTERN NEWS.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION CONTINUES TO IMPROVE.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 29.—8:30 A. M.—Immediately after the morning dressing yesterday the president's afternoon fever began gradually to subside. He slept well in the night and this morning is free from fever. He is well and expresses himself cheerfully. No rigors have occurred during the past 24 hours, nor indeed at any time since the 25th inst. A moderate rise of temperature in the afternoon is to be anticipated for some days to come. At present his pulse is 92, temperature 98 4-10, respiration 18.

11:30 A. M.—The president is passing another quiet, comfortable day. Since the morning bulletin his temperature and respiration have remained normal and his pulse is 100. His nourishment has consisted of the juice of freshly roasted beef, milk and prepared meat extract. Attending surgeons have also given him a small quantity of the Tartar beverage known as Koumiss.

1 P. M.—The president has been comfortable and had a quiet nap since noon. The febrile rise came on later and was not so marked as yesterday. The wound has been discharging freely and looks well. At present his pulse is 98, temperature 100, respiration 20.

[illegible] P. M.—The president bore the dressing of his wound well this morning and exhibited very little fatigue after the operation. The appearance of the wound, character and quantity of the discharge and general condition of the patient are satisfactory. He rests well and takes adequate nourishment. At present his pulse is 98, temperature 98.4.

Points from the Sick Chamber.

[illegible] P. M.—Prof. Bell is working hopefully on his invention for locating bullets and has an ingenious contrivance already. The president was propped up in bed by his own request, sitting nearly upright for half an hour. This eased him and he soon fell asleep. Very few visitors to-day and the cabinet was not there. Collector Robertson called together with the physicians. All are talking hopefully and confidently. The wound discharges freely. The president is impatient to get out of bed. No access of fever to-night. The president dreads the painful operation of dressing the wound every evening.

[illegible] P. M.—The president has had a very favorable day and there is a marked improvement in his condition to-night as compared with that of three days ago. He has taken in the past 15 hours fully the usual allowance of nourishment and there has been a slight increase in his physical strength. The febrile rise which came on as usual this afternoon, was less strongly marked than yesterday and his maximum temperature about half a degree lower. There was a free discharge of pus at the evening dressing of the wound and it was of perfectly healthy character. Shortly after the evening examination fever began to subside and the patient fell asleep and has slept most of the time since. He is now free from fever with pulse below 100 and temperature and respiration normal. Surgeons report his condition to be every way satisfactory.

Encouraging.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Postmaster-General James has sent a dispatch to New York stating that after consultation with physicians he is of the opinion that the president is in a very good condition, and that everything is of the most encouraging character.

The London "Lancet's" View.

LONDON, July 29.—The Lancet says of Garfield: A portion of his dress may have been carried into the wound, and each of the abscesses that forms is not only a direct source of danger from pain and fever, and danger from spreading deeply, but with each there is fresh liability to blood poisoning. It is quite impossible to feel any certainty. We may to-day hear of another abscess or relapse, and it is of great importance that the patient's constitutional vigor should be maintained at as high a pitch as possible, in view of future troubles. The absence of fever and severe exhaustion removes any cause for any immediate alarm, but until the wound is quite healed and the bullet either removed or safely encysted, there is liability to the recurring of abscesses, each attended with risk of blood poisoning.

Hartmann in America.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Leo Hartmann, a celebrated Russian nihilist, who has successfully escaped the snares of the most acute detectives in the world, arrived in this city from Europe yesterday. Hartmann being interviewed, said: "As soon as circumstances will permit, I am fully prepared to return to Russia, together with my comrades, I mean to continue to the battle and the struggle against despotism. I came as a delegate of the executive committee of the Russian revolutionary party to the people of the United States, and have no personal motives in coming here."

Failures for the Week.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Dun, Wyman & Co. close the weekly review of business as follows: "Failures continue noticeably small in the western states, only 13 of any importance are reported. In the middle states but 24, Eastern 11, Pacific coast [illegible]. Total 7[illegible], against some 80 last week."

The Railroad War.

NEW YORK, July 29.—There is apparently an armistice in the railway war to-day, each watching the others. Brokers are fiercest against the Pennsylvania Central and the latter claims that other roads have cut them. It was rumored to-day that the roads would cut rates west from here, but this is denied by Fink and all freight agents. The war at Boston continues.

The southwestern freight pools refuse to pro rate with eastern roads on cut rates.

Railroad Stocks.

Stocks are generally higher on account of rumors that the railroad war will soon cease.

Misplaced Switches.

NEW YORK, July 29. Two cases of misplaced switches in the last 24 hours on the Hudson River railroad. One of the criminals was arrested.

Mining Business.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Mining associated press reports as follows, concerning the mining stock market during the past seven days: Mining stocks very dull, and generally weaker. The leaders, [illegible] State Line, Oriental and Miller stocks are again declining. Oriental and Miller to-day selling at lowest for the week. Total sales of mining stocks at both exchanges over 650,000 shares.

On Trial.

NEW YORK, July 29.—The old suit of Wilkinson, of Marquette, Mich., assignee in bankruptcy of Wm. L. Wetmore against Tilden, was called in the circuit court before Judge Blatchford to-day.

The New York Greenbackers.

ALBANY, July 29.—The greenback labor party state convention will be held at Elmira, Aug. 23.

The Hunt for the Train Robbers.

ST. LOUIS, July 29.—Governor Crittenden has issued a proclamation, 15,000 copies being distributed, announcing that robberies have been perpetrated by banded raiders in the past at Glendale and Winston, that murder has been done at the latter place; that Frank and Jesse James are indicted for murder and have fled from justice. Therefore in lieu of all previous rewards, the governor offers $5000 for the arrest and conviction of each participant in the robberies and murders aforesaid. For the arrest of Frank or Jesse James $5000 each extra is offered.

Another Raid.

ST. LOUIS, July 29.—The sheriff of Laclede county is here to-day having in his possession a letter from a gentleman, whose reliability he vouches for, stating a party of seven well armed and mounted men were seen six miles from Pluto, Texas county, Mo., Thursday night, who fully answer the description of the Winston train robbers. They were traveling towards the Iron Mountain railroad, and the writer of the letter evidently thinks that they will be heard from at some point on that road. Railroad officials have been advised.

A Texas View.

The Republican has a somewhat remarkable special from Palestine, Texas. Mayor [illegible] of Palestine says that when the governors decide on the day, he will issue a proclamation inviting general thanksgiving by citizens here for the recovery of President Garfield. Lieutenant Governor Storey passed through here to-day and said that if a united call is made from the people he will issue a proclamation to the whole state regardless of the attitude of Governor Roberts. The mayors of Galveston and Cameron side with the governor and refuse to join in the thanksgiving requests of the people. There is apparently a reaction in favor of Gov. Roberts as the public begin to think his position is misconstrued. He has never issued a thanksgiving proclamation during either of his terms as governor, and is evidently conscientiously opposed to it, and the truth forces me to say that observers among a large and respectable class of citizens believe that the president's injuries have been greatly magnified for three ostensible reasons: First, to make a great reputation for the attending physicians; second, to make it appear as almost miraculous recovery, attributable principally to the president's extraordinary powers, and third, that the alleged deception has not been altogether free from political bearing, particularly up to the time of the termination of the contest at Albany.

Railroad Collision.

ERIE, N. Y., July 29.—Two men were killed, several badly injured and thirty-two cars wrecked by collision of freight trains on the New York and New Haven and Hartford railroad here this afternoon.

Mean Business.

EAU CLAIRE, July 29.—Eight Indian scouts headed by Bogus Charlie and Yellowstone Kelly, with thirty [illegible] hitherto employed on the plains by the government, have arrived to join in putting down the Maxwell bandits.

Killed.

CAIRO, Mo., July 29.—The dwelling of M. Silverstine was damaged by fire this morning. George Bradford was killed, S. [illegible] Pinney probably fatally injured, and others wounded by a falling chimney.

Where the Machines were Made.

PEORIA, Ill., July 29.—[illegible] Wanamarter, city editor of the National Democrat, stated to-day that he has discovered that the internal machines recently received in London were manufactured in this city. A director of the association of United Irishmen lives here and is supposed to know all about the matter. Four of the machines were made here and shipped to New York, where they were loaded with dynamite and then shipped to London. The manufactory is on South Washington street. The reporter has been invited by one of the interested parties to witness an exhibition of the destructive power of the machines at a trial to be made within a mile of the city.

The report that the infernal machines were made here creates great excitement. P. W. Crowe, who was implicated in their manufacture, denies it, but says that he knows who did the work. They were made at O'Rourke's foundry on South Washington street. They were of iron and zinc in sections. The machinery and dynamite were supplied in New York.

Up in a Balloon.

MOLINE, July 29.—A farmer picked up a bottle yesterday containing a note dropped from a balloon which left Milwaukee July 2[illegible]. Its date was July 2[illegible], 11:15 P. M. It says that the balloon was [illegible] and [illegible].

Tannery Burned.

HARRISBURG, July 29.—The large tannery of M. Kern [illegible], at Watsontown, [illegible] burned yesterday. Loss, [illegible]; insurance $40,000.

A Respectable Murderer.

MONROE, Mich., July 29.—J. P. Tyler, barber at [illegible] Springs, New Mexico, reported in to-day's telegram, as having shot Major [illegible], is a nephew of ex-congressman [illegible] Petrie, and has many relatives and friends here. He is a cousin to Ross [illegible] Cabaniss, whose sad death will be remembered, and he has a brother living in Chicago. He is a [illegible] esteemed where known.

Hanging at Leadville.

LEADVILLE, July 29. Frank Gilbert and Merrick Rosengrants were hanged this morning in the presence of about 7000 people. Rosengrants declared his innocence while Gilbert claimed self-defense. Everything went off quietly.

Dartmouth College.

[illegible], July 29.—The committee of trustees of the Dartmouth college did not investigate the complaints of the alumni, some errors of management not confined to one person, and have endeavored to correct them. The affairs of the college are in the hands of careful and watchful persons, who are conscientious and devoted to the [illegible]. The committee hope that the alumni will [illegible] the results [illegible].

Killed by Lightning.

[illegible], July 29.—Three were killed and four wounded by lightning to-day.

Captured.

PITTSBURG, July 29. The men who last March burned old man Wm. Connors and his wife until they discovered the whereabouts of $16,000 in cash and securities, were arrested to-day while robbing the house. Their names are [illegible] W. Nelson, [illegible] L. Scott and Miller, with a [illegible] in Cleveland, [illegible] Roland. Nelson and Scott claim to be innocent.

Export and Import Statistics.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Excess of exports of merchandise over imports during the year ending June 30, 1881, was $[illegible],720,241, against $[illegible] during the previous fiscal year. Excess of imports of gold for the past fiscal year, $91,168,6[illegible]; previous year, $75,891,391. During the last year the value of exports of merchandise amounted to $902,319,473, being larger than ever before in the history of the country. Value of imports of merchandise, $642,[illegible]93,219, which was larger than during any previous year, with the exception of the year immediately preceding. Total value by foreign commerce of the United States, imports and exports of merchandise for the fiscal year, $1,544,912,696, exceeding any previous year. Exports of specie exceed of imports during each fiscal year from 1862 to 1879, but during the last two fiscal years, imports exceed exports, and such excess amounting during the year ended June 30, 1880, to $75,891,391, and during the year ended June 30, 1881, to $91,168,650.

A Challenge.

Fred. Krohne challenges O'Leary, Harriman, Fabre, Tracy and Vaughn to walk 144 hours at New York or Chicago for $500 to $1,000 a side.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Pugh's Murderers.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Kirkwood says the Indian department has nothing further regarding the murder of Pugh in Mexico. Agents are investigating whether Mexican marauders or Apache Indians killed him, and if the latter, whether they belong on a reservation or are a roving band. The department will do its utmost to bring the murderers to justice.

Precautionary Measure.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The national board of health has revised its rules concerning prevention of smallpox, and one thereof requires that immigrants before sailing to the United States shall be vaccinated.

Brayton's Murder.

Gen. Raum goes to Illinois next week. A detailed report of the murder of Collector Brayton has been received. Deputies arriving at the scene of his murder were unable to obtain any one to go with them to the murderer's, McDow's, house. The livery stable refused to let horses to the deputies. Brayton's body was uncared for by the citizens. The coroner's verdict was death by unknown parties although it was perfectly clear that McDow had openly proclaimed in town that he had killed Brayton. McDow is a dangerous man and whenever he visited town intoxicated the stores were closed until he withdrew. It is believed that he will surrender, having no fears of conviction. Endeavors, however, have been made to arrest him. The commissioners' reward of $[illegible]00 incited several parties to the pursuit. State authorities have taken no action. People are either in sympathy with or fear him and make the arrest difficult.

Adrift at Sea.

The captain shot twice, and the crew left in the boats, short of provisions and water. Longitude 40 west, latitude about 37. Signed, B. Dutty. The Lugar sailed from Parrsboro last month.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

Down in Georgia the Augusta Chronicle has found a man who does not believe President Garfield was wounded at all, and thinks the whole story "a Yankee lie."

The pistol agitation has reached England, where the tailors deny Mr. Richard Grant White's assertion that pistol-pockets are a necessary attachment to English pantaloons.

A colossal statue of Mr. Gladstone is to be presented to the city of London by Mr. Theodore Bryant. It represents the great statesman, in ordinary morning dress, delivering a speech.

A cruel western paper uses Griscom's fast as an argument against feeding tramps, since the condition of their blood corpuscles shows that they have been at least six weeks without food.

The historian Lecky writes that, while he is not a disciple of Carlyle, he has no doubt future generations will regard that philosopher as one of the greatest intellectual figures and, on the whole, one of the healthiest moral influences of his time.

The Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, who has resigned all his offices at the age of 54, has spent his life in the public service. He was made a post-captain at 20, and in 1862 was made governor of Poland. He is now described as "a sated man of pleasure."

The vacancy in the second congressional district of Maine, caused by Mr. Frye's elevation to the senate, will not be filled without a contest. Republican, greenback and prohibition candidates are already in the field, and a democrat will be nominated next month.

Edmund Yates, speaking of the habit that Russians have of beating their servants, and probably their friends, says: "I have myself seen the governor of Taurus slapping the face of a postmaster right and left, and most furiously saying at the same time 'I beg most humbly.'"

It is probable that Baltimore will carry off the prize for the largest number of boys killed by the toy pistol on the Fourth. It is nearly three weeks since the Fourth, but boys are still dying from lockjaw occasioned by toy-pistol wounds. Baltimore has turned up 18 victims and has not yet reached the end of the list.

Joseph Hendry, "who sounded the keynote of the loud skirl of pibrochs heard by Jessie Brown and her beleaguered companions when cowering they crouched hourly expecting a horrible death within the confines of Lucknow" as the local paper eloquently puts it—is now a crippled pensioner at Arnprior, Ottawa, Canada.

Aunt Sallie Thrasher, as she was familiarly known by a large number of friends and relatives, died at her home, near Gish's mill, in Roanoke county, Va., on the 5th inst., at the great age of 103—some of her relations say 106—years. A sister, Mrs. Polly Short, near 100 years old, and a brother, Edward Short, aged about 93 years, survive Mrs. Thrasher.

Arthur and his Nomination.

[Albany Argus, Dem.]

When Gen. Arthur was tendered the vice-presidential nomination on behalf of the Ohio delegation, by Gov. Dennison at Chicago, Senator Conkling urged him for half an hour to refuse it, as he already had got Levi P. Morton to do so, on the ground that "the ticket would be beaten, and that he should not be dragged down with it." Arthur said: "The ticket will be beaten if we lose New York. If I take this, I'll see New York is carried. I think the success of any republican preferable to that of any democrat, and I will accept." This is a fact, though not before anywhere published. It has historical interest at this time.

Mr. Villard, who was at Altoona, Pa., when the news of the great tornado in Minnesota reached him, telegraphed, "Please communicate to the proper parties that the Oregon Transcontinental Company will contribute $1000, and myself, personally, $500, for the relief of the New Ulm sufferers. You may draw on me for the total amount in New York. Will endeavor to raise some more funds in that city."

KEENE'S TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Prices to be Greatly Reduced—New Appliance by which Several Thousand Words per Minute can be Transmitted—Etc., Etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, July 29.—Keene's new telegraph company was [illegible] organized to-day. [illegible] Wall street [illegible] and south. Keene's new [illegible] great telegraph competition which is to [illegible] up against the monopoly of the Western Union. The new company is well provided with money, an evidence of by the names of some of the incorporators: John W. Mackey of bonanza fame, George [illegible] Keefe, mine manipulator, [illegible] Victor Newcomb, [illegible] O'Brien, also [illegible] and others. The stock is chiefly in the hands of California, New York and Boston capitalists, although some portion is said to be taken in Europe. It is proposed to construct a system of telegraph lines in the United States, Canada and Mexico and do a general telegraph business. New lines [illegible] working capacity to the present Western Union system shall be in operation [illegible] by January, 1882. The new company have recently obtained [illegible] which they claim will enable them to do this without interfering with the rights and patents held by the Western Union. [illegible] a new system of automatic and fac-simile telegraphy, the patentee being W. A. Leggo. These patents have been assigned to the Electro-graphic [illegible] incorporated [illegible] and the company [illegible] the latter get exclusive rights to use the Leggo automatic and fac-simile machines [illegible]. The electrographic [illegible] not propose to go into general telegraphic business, but will continue to perfect and manufacture machines [illegible] system. Messages can be sent at the average rate of 1500 to 2000 words per minute, while by the old method 25 words per minute is the capacity of instruments with proper wire and instruments in perfect order. The managers of the new company say that they have every reason to believe that the rate of five thousand words per minute is practicable. The American Rapid Telegraph [illegible] is similar to this in many respects, but practically [illegible] speed is limited to less than 1,000 words per minute. At the rate of 2000 words a minute the new company can transmit more words in a quarter of an hour than by the ordinary method in 24 hours. By this mechanism 120,000 words can be transmitted in an hour over one wire, and in a [illegible] nearly four million words. They can do more business with one wire between two points than the Western Union can do with all theirs. The instrument consists of an iron wheel about two feet and a half in diameter, with a carefully turned [illegible] broad. Above this is an instrument like the Morse sounder, moving from left to right on a screw, while the large wheel turns around slowly at right angles. Above the screw is a [illegible] of especially prepared aniline silk. The operator works the sounder as he would a Morse instrument in sending a message, and as the large wheel revolves, the negative of the message he desires to send appears in [illegible] Morse characters in aniline ink in parallel lines round the periphery of the large wheel, the surface of which can receive the impress of 500 words. A message of this length can be put on the wheel in half the time it would take an operator to send it off, as in the latter case the operator cannot send a message more rapidly than a receiver can receive and write it off. If the receiver loses a word, the time of both sender and receiver is lost in repeating it. A message can be put upon this wheel at the rate of 80 to 100 words per minute, and while the message is being written the wire can be used in sending other messages. When the message has been completed on the wheel, the Morse like instrument is thrown back to the starting point and the ink point is replaced by a metallic button on a long arm, which presses constantly on the wheel. The wheel and button are put in circuit. The large wheel is revolved at a high rate of speed, while the button travels from left to right across the surface, keeping constantly on the line of the negative Morse character. When the button is on the "ink" characters the circuit is broken; when on the wheel itself between the characters, it is reversed. By this system in sending a message of say 2000 words to San Francisco, which by the present method would take several hours, before the last of the message has been reeled off the wheel the first of it would be received, and this without increasing the cost of transmission. The managers say that it will reduce the cost of telegraphing to a fraction more than the usual postal rates. One of them said to-day that long messages will cost but little more than short ones. A general rate, as with letters, should be made for all points east of the Mississippi, and two or three times as much charged for points beyond. The prospectus says that the company proposes to construct lines, telegraph across the continent, communicating with ocean cables and connecting all the leading cities and towns in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Another advantage claimed by the new company is possession of the [illegible] way duplex system of telegraphing. The [illegible] system allows six messages to be sent simultaneously over a single wire in the same or opposite directions, each message being sent as if it were in a different key or tone from the others. This embraces the way duplex system by which any number of stations on a line may communicate with each other on a single wire on which through messages is simultaneously being done. The conductivity of the wire to be used is much greater than that of any other wire used, resistance being so much less than that of ordinary telegraph wire as to bring Chicago telegraphically as near New York as Syracuse compared with the best wire now in use and bringing San Francisco this side of Chicago. The patents covering this wire and machinery and the appliances used in its manufacture as well as factory, have recently been purchased by the postal telegraph company. The price paid is said to have been $1,500,000. This will prevent the American Rapid telegraph company from extending their existing lines except upon terms stipulated by the postal telegraph company. The estimated cost of the company's lines, [illegible] 3,000 miles of wire with all equipments, offices, repairs and incidentals is $125,000,000.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

CALIFORNIA.

The San Francisco Tonnage Situation.

SAN FRANCISCO July 29.—The Commercial News reviews the freight market, says: The record of the past week has been a most satisfactory one to those having vessels to charter. At the date of our last report the harbor was bare of disengaged tonnage suitable for wheat, but on Saturday and Sunday a number of vessels made port, followed by one or two since then, giving in all nine arrivals here and two at Wilmington, with a total of 13,25[illegible] tons register. Of this amount 5271 tons was disengaged. The demand on Monday and Tuesday was such as to absorb the whole amount and subsequent arrivals have all been under engagement. It was thought that the market would give way slightly under pressure to charter but this was not the case to any extent and the last rates paid were fully up to the highest quotations made within the past two months. There is evidently considerable wheat that exporters would like to see afloat and the probabilities are that even with heavy arrivals the disengaged list will remain small for some time to come. The fleet is still large and the coming week will probably witness the arrival of a considerable part of it. The British ship Craigfamie, burned at sea, was under charter at full rate. She was one of a number of ships which have been expected for some time past. The latest charters reported are British bark Newark, 1001 tons, wheat to Cork, U. K., £3 12s 6d, prior to arrival; Italian bark St. Andrea, 445 tons, wheat from Wilmington to Cork U. K., £3 [illegible], from San Francisco to Cork, U. K., £3 4s prior to arrival.

A Railroad Case.

YUMA, July 29.—The Southern Pacific Railroad Co. has commenced suit in the district court here against the Texas Pacific to restrain defendant during pendency of action from commencing or prosecuting any actions against plaintiff or its lessee, to real property comprised within the lines of right of way claimed by plaintiff, or right to its use or occupation; that it may be adjudged that plaintiff as owner of said real property; that defendants claims thereto are invalid, and that defendant has no interest in or to said property and that temporary restraining order be made perpetual.

NORTHERN IDAHO.

Big Railroad Scheme Started by Prominent Citizens.

LEWISTON, July 29.—Articles of incorporation of the Idaho, Clearwater & Montana Transportation company were filed to-day under the laws of Idaho, with the clerk of the district court for the first district of Idaho, and a certified copy forwarded to the secretary of Idaho. This new company embraces seventeen prominent citizens of north Idaho, and it is claimed that they have been induced to form this company at the instance of several eastern capitalists, with the view of securing the routes named, and that preliminary surveys of these routes will soon be made under the direction of the managing trustees, that the purpose of the incorporation is to build a railroad and telegraph line eastward from Lewiston via the Clearwater pass of the Bitter Root mountains and the Big Horn pass of the Rocky mountains, to intersect with the Northern, a distance of less than 300 miles, and through a much better country than that of the Northern Pacific or Snake river route via Boise and Boise City, and about 150 miles shorter. They also propose to build from Lewiston via the Snake and Grand Ronde rivers to La Grande, Oregon, a distance of 100 miles. They further propose to build a railroad and telegraph from Lewiston north via the Potlatch, South Palouse, Four Mile, North Palouse, Cedar Creek, Pine Creek and Fork Creek valleys, and the outlet of Cœur d'Alene lake, the east portion of the Spokane plains to intersect the Northern Pacific near West wood. They also propose to construct, equip and operate steam boats on the Snake, Clearwater and Columbia rivers in connection with their railroads. They claim for these routes great advantages over any other lines for the character of country through

A rattlesnake was killed on John Wyatt's farm two miles west of Corvallis a few days ago, by a boy of 8 and a girl of 6 years, under the following circumstances. The little boy and girl were [illegible] between the house and a shop near by. The boy ran to get the ax while the little girl remained to keep watch over the venomous discovery. While the boy was gone the snake started to make its exit and crawled under the edge of the shop, and when he returned the little girl had it hold under the building and was about a foot from it when the boy struck it with the ax, cutting it in pieces. The only way that Mr. Wyatt accounts for neither of the children being bitten was that during all this time the small terrier dog was also in pursuit and kept running up and back and constantly barking at the reptile, which probably attracted more of its attention than the children. The snake had upon it seven rattles, and was two feet and eight inches long. So far as is known, this is the first of these unwelcome visitors to that part of Benton county.

Tacoma Ledger: After the people of Newcastle had prepared a house [illegible] of town for Davis, the young man with small pox, his parents, who had taken him and [illegible] refused to allow him to remain out, locking the doors to prevent any one entering with that intention. This state of affairs, while it shows to what extent parental love and affection will extend, is to be regretted, as the houses of that place are so close together that the disease is liable to spread. However, all possible precautions will be taken by the authorities there against the further spread of the disease, and it is to be hoped their efforts will prove successful.

Tacoma Ledger: A very large amount of land is yearly being cleared and brought under cultivation in Puyallup valley. Last year J. W. Rosland, three-fourths of a mile from Puyallup station, is very [illegible]. He will plant ten acres in hops and sow the balance in timothy. The land is so located that water from never-failing springs in the bluff can, at little expense, be carried all over the tract, at any time he may desire to irrigate it. The land will produce 3 tons of hay to the acre and, in favorable season, 2500 pounds of hops.

British Columbia.

The heat all last week at Yale and points beyond is described by passengers who came down on the Western Slope as unbearable. The thermometer stood at 97 in the shade and from 114 to 120 in the sun, while not a breath of air fanned the aching brows of those whose duty required them to face it. At Lytton on Saturday evening the thermometer indicated 98 in the shade.

Haying has commenced at Comox and the settlers are correspondingly busy. It appears that a species of caterpillar is playing sad havoc with the hay. This insect devours first the tender shoots of the hay and then ascending the stalk devours the head of the timothy. In some places the crop will be a total failure. The settlers say it is the first time they ever saw the caterpillars eat timothy hay in that manner. The crops otherwise are good throughout the district.

The Opium Traffic.

LONDON, July 29. The secretary of the society for the suppression of the opium trade some time ago wrote to the viceroy of China explaining the society's views on the traffic. The viceroy in reply says: "Opium is a subject on which England and China can never meet on common grounds. China views the whole question from a moral and England from a fiscal standpoint. The Chinese government is impressed with the necessity of making strenuous efforts to control the flood of opium before it overwhelms the whole country. The new treaty with America containing a prohibitory clause encourages the belief that great principles, justice and feelings of humanity will prevail in the future relations of China with western nations."

Wonderful Liver Story.

The New York Times has published the following with a childlike faith in the genuineness of the statement:

"LOST—A LIVER.—To the Editor of the New York Times: The number of people who are coming to the front with livers that have been perforated with cannon, musket, rifle and pistol balls is not astonish the general public. but to the veterans of the late war it is an old story. The writer desires to put himself on record, as well as the Grand Army of Sieve Livers. During the Mexican war I was an Ohio volunteer, and during a skirmish near the city of Vera Cruz, was shot between the eleventh and twelfth ribs, and half of my liver was carried away. After my recovery from the wound I enjoyed better health than previous to the disaster. During the war of the rebellion, while a member of an Ohio regiment, and at the battle of Arkansas Post I was shot between the tenth and eleventh ribs, and the remaining half of my liver disappeared. After recovery, I was a better man than ever. In fact, I never knew what perfect health was till I lost my liver. My case would seem to prove, and I believe such to be the case, that the liver is a mistake of nature. The most singular part of my case is that neither the balls or the liver have ever been found. The Term Porte.

This term "Porte," which is used to denote the administrative government of the Ottoman empire, and includes the sultan, the grand vizier and the great council of state, had its origin in this way: In the famous institutes established by the famous warrior Sultan Mohamed II, the Turkish body politic was described by the metaphor of a stately tent, whose dome rested upon four pillars. The viziers formed the first pillar, the judges the next, the treasurers the third and the secretaries the fourth. The chief seat of government was figuratively named the "Lofty Gate of the Royal Tent," in allusion to the practice of early times when the Ottoman rulers sat at the tent doors to administer justice. The Italian translation of this name was "La Porta Sublima." This phrase was modified in English to the "Sublime Porte," and finally the adjective has been dropped, leaving it simply "The Porte."

GUITEAU AS A LITERARY FRAUD.

[Boston Transcript.]

One day in June a little more than a year ago, a man entered the editorial rooms of the Transcript, and inquiring for the literary editor, advanced to his desk and with a flourish sat down, [illegible] Introducing himself further, the visitor explained that he was the celebrated author and orator who had made several tours in the west, and expressed much astonishment on hearing that the editor was wholly ignorant of his name and reputation. His special errand was to call attention to a volume he had just published, which was destined to create a strong impression upon the thinking portion of the country. It had been read in manuscript by a number of prominent western divines, who considered it the strongest presentation of the cause of Christianity outside the Bible. "Further than that," he continued, "they agree with me that it fills certain gaps where the scriptures are lacking, and that is why I have entitled it 'A Companion to the Bible.'"

The work in question, having been unfolded from its paper wrapper, was presented to the editor. It was a coarsely printed octavo volume of [illegible] pages, bearing the title, "The Truth, A Companion to the Bible," with the name of Charles J. Guiteau, Boston, as author, and purporting to be published in the well known house of D. Lothrop & Company.

"I have disposed of two large editions in Chicago without advertising," said the visitor, "simply on my reputation. I sustain in that city as a biblical scholar. But it isn't money I am after. I intend to remain in the east, and I want people to know me, and I want, too, to exert the same influence here as in the west in the way of bringing souls to God."

During this address he took off the soiled and slightly worn silk hat from his head [illegible] at the curtains of the meantime seated himself with the evident design of making an extended stay. There was something peculiarly offensive in his manner. With an ordinary fanatic one can have patience, because of the honesty of belief, but there was something about Guiteau which gave one the instinctive feeling that the whole thing was put on. There was no earnestness in his appearance of sincerity about the man, and his ideal about religious matters had a ring of apparent truth in it than the talk of a book agent. He evidently had a high idea of his personal appearance, and was continually posing himself, as if sitting for a picture. Some of the time with his hand thrust in his breast and his head thrown back, again with his head resting on his hand and his eyes turned up, and then again his face turned in profile, with his arms folded. One could almost imagine him practicing these airs and attitudes before a glass. He was about the middle size, slim in build, with a rather small face which might at one time have been full but had grown thin, his hair brushed up in a towering dark crest of style giving a very peculiar look to his head, and he wore a thin beard and mustache. He was a very fair type of that class of persons who visit newspaper offices to discuss literature and borrow $2 of the editor when they get out.

He was told that the book would be looked over and attended to in due course, and after a vain attempt to prolong the conversation departed. The next day he again made his appearance and asked that when the notice appeared it should be stated that the author had taken up his residence in Boston, as he had been warmly pressed by the principal [illegible] to take up the work [illegible] Moody and Sankey. This he was informed, could not be done in connection with a book notice. A day or two later he made another visit to inquire why his book had been neglected, and three times during the following week. When the notice at last appeared, he exhibited a good deal of anger because it was not complimentary, and his language, though not personally insulting, profane, justified the idea previously formed as to his religious sincerity and honesty.

In the half dozen conversations had with him, the idea of his insanity never entered the mind of the writer. His egotism was intense and as absurd as it was immense. His falsehoods he uttered were not those of a man who believed them himself. He was a keen shrewd calculating fraud, as after investigation proved. His book was a jumble of texts and references and was evidently compiled from other sources, instead of having been written after an original plan.

Reference having been made to the publication of the book by D. Lothrop & Co., inquiry of that firm elicited an explanation of how it happened that the book bears their imprint. Guiteau took the book to the Messrs. Lothrop and asked them to become its publishers. It was handed by the firm to their committee of examination, who at once rejected it. Guiteau then took it to Messrs. Wright & Potter and had the Messrs. Lothrop's name inserted without their knowledge. A small edition of the book was printed by Guiteau, who had the impudence to take some of them to Mr. Lothrop and ask that they might be put on sale. At first they were refused, but finally the firm consented that enough might be left to fill two or three orders which had been received. After Guiteau had gone the book was examined, and as a result the whole were put up and sent back to him.

G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, publish "American Nervousness, Its Causes and Consequences," by Dr. George M. Beard, a supplement to that author's recently published work on "Nervous Exhaustion." The present work is of a more distinctively popular character than the former treatise, which was addressed chiefly to the profession. Dr. Beard defines nervousness as being strictly a deficiency or lack of nerve force. Its symptoms, he says, have developed mainly within the present century, and especially within the northern and eastern portions of the United States. "The chief and primary cause of this nervousness," he says, "is modern civilization, which is distinguished from the ancient by these five characteristics, viz: steam power, the periodical press, the telegraph, the sciences, and the mental activity of women." He finds also that "the greater prevalence of nervousness in America is the complex resultant of a number of influences, the chief of which are dryness of the air, extremes of heat and cold, civil and religious liberty, and the great mental activity made necessary and possible in a new and productive country, under such climatic conditions." This is a singular combination of causes, but not more singular than the variety of results traced to their effects, among which are increase of the nervous diseases, susceptibility to stimulants, hay fever, neuralgia, decay of teeth, premature baldness, increase of diseases not exclusively nervous, [illegible] beauty of American women, frequency of trance and mind reading, American oratory, humor and [illegible] longevity of animal life on this continent. It is gratifying to be told that the evil of nervousness, after becoming a national one, is likely to [illegible] itself by the American people [illegible] rapid accumulation of wealth, which will bring quiet and repose, and thus restore shattered nerves in the coming generation. "Baby Rue" is the title of a fresh volume of the No Name Series. Roberts Brothers, Boston. Fiction of late has been dealing a great deal with the treatment of the Indians by the government of the United States. The writer of "Baby Rue" seems to know intimately the longings as well as the petty trials and ills of frontier and camp life in the west, the humors as well as the pitiful side of the existence of army officers. As a rule it is not the [illegible] with which she deals, sometimes realistically, but oftener in the spirit of Fenimore Cooper, especially as regards the Indian characters. There is some confusion of names and persons, owing to a too liberal equipment of the stage, and the family history of the Rosenskys becomes wearisome in the end. Yet this is no more a needlessly ancestral authoress tacks on an appendix devoted to a chronicle of the Rosensky family from Adam to the days of Jefferson. The plot is the abduction of "Baby Rue," last descendant of the Rosenskys, by a Pawnee warrior who is attracted by her pretty face and defiant manner during a raid of the [illegible] of Indians. Military movements ensue; going into the Creek country to obtain the rash recapture or ransom of the child. She is found at last and her capture [illegible] a marriage between a young officer and the daughter of a Seminole chief. There are stirring descriptions, such as the attack and defense of a camp, the ride of "Little Misery" with his patches and a bullet through his chest, the death of Major Moore, of the First Dragoons, a novel, on the whole, much above the average of this season. SELF-SUPPORTING MAIL SERVICE.

Though recent investigations have called public attention away from the star route iniquities, the investigation by the department, with a view to punishing offenders and to revolutionizing the system under which their fraudulent operations became possible, has not been abandoned. The search for frauds continues. So vast is the field that only a small part of it has as yet been thoroughly explored. New discoveries of transactions like those heretofore published are still reported almost daily. In the New York Times of last date received we have a full page of new developments, similar in all respects to those heretofore given. Washington advices say that Postmaster General James is determined not only to reform abuses in the notorious star route system, but to introduce such changes in the management of the contract service as will prevent repetition of frauds of this character. When he entered office he found that a great ring had fastened itself upon the postal department. Its ramifications were coextensive with the country, and its head center was seated in the chair of the second assistant postmaster general. Several millions of dollars were being swallowed up annually. Already a saving has been effected of nearly a million and a half a year by reduction of unnecessary service and annulment of fraudulent contracts. It is believed that with increase of revenues and stoppage of swindling the department can soon be made to sustain itself, and perhaps even to pay a revenue into the treasury. The estimated revenues of the department for the current fiscal year are $39,578,780, and they are likely to exceed the estimates, as the increase in nearly all parts of the country is large. The cost of carrying on the department for the year, as estimated by the officials and authorized by congress, is $40,955,432. The present administration has already lopped off nearly enough from this outlay to bring expenditures down to estimated receipts.

The breaking up of the star route swindles is notably important as a saving of money, but it is still more important as a purifying and elevating measure that will prove of inestimable value in raising the tone of the postal service and improving its efficiency. Too much credit cannot be awarded to the postmaster-general and the administration for this substantial and salutary reform, and if it results in giving us a self-sustaining department next year, the satisfaction of the public will doubtless be plainly made known. Nevertheless, it should be borne in mind by the authorities that the first object of the postal service is the accommodation of the people, and, however desirable it may be to make the department pay its own way, that end is not to be gained by economies that endanger the efficiency of the service. But of this there can not be much danger. Members of congress will be on hand to protect against reductions that would cause real inconvenience to the people, and the chances will be rather against economy not going far enough than too far. It doesn't make, in fact, very much difference whether the postal service pays its way or not; but it does make a great deal of difference whether the revenues are stolen or not. The legitimate cost of carrying the mails is to be met, and it isn't of so much consequence whether the revenues of the postoffice are equal to its expenses, or whether congress is called upon for appropriations to make up the deficiencies. Since the people of the newer states pay but small part of the expenses of their postal service they can not very well insist that service be put upon a strictly paying basis. They certainly can not call for introduction of any measures to make the department self-supporting which would cramp the service or limit its action as a necessary public convenience. As a general principle, giving to the postoffice its full measure of utility, it is eminently desirable that the expenses should be paid directly by those who make the most use of it and receive the greatest benefit from it. If this were not the case, if it were just as well for Uncle Sam to pay the cost, the simple way would be for the government to carry the mails for nothing, abandoning postage stamps and postal rates altogether. The justice and equity of the payment of postage by those who use the mails needs no exposition, and, if any payment is to be made at all, it is also clear enough that payment should be made in full. Heretofore, it has not been practicable, for many reasons to make the postoffice self-sustaining, and the government has wisely been made the agency for meeting the deficiency. This deficiency has been very greatly increased, as the country now knows, by swindlers under the star route system. But it is absolutely necessary to furnish mail service for large tracts of country where the revenues cannot possibly pay more than a small portion of the expense. It costs about as much to carry a mail bag with ten letters as with ten hundred, and yet it is necessary to maintain the routes over which the smaller number is carried. What is to be avoided is unnecessary and enormously expensive "expediting," not for the convenience of the people but for the profit of contractors. The progress of the country is gradually filling up the empty bags and bringing the revenues of the non-paying routes more nearly up to the expense of maintaining them. Just before the outbreak of the rebellion the increasing use of the mails equalized the revenues and expenses of the postal department, and in 1861 the postmaster general was enabled for the first time in our history to show a small surplus. The war, of course, seriously interfered with the workings of the department, and a considerable annual deficit has since been unavoidably incurred. The deficit has, however, been steadily decreasing of late years, and has now been so far reduced that it is evident the department can be made permanently self sustaining within a short time.

Earnings of most of the railroads of the country are increasing very rapidly. According to a New York financial journal the earnings of forty-one roads on a mileage of 32,119 miles for the month of June were $17,058,006, against $13,068,485 last year, when the number of miles operated was 28,606. From January 1 to June 30 the earnings of forty-three roads aggregated the enormous sum of $102,171,690, a gain of nearly $12,500,000 as compared with the same period in 1880.

What is called the Windom plan of dealing with the maturing national debt is now completed. The annual saving of interest will be $15,411,161. The interest the government now pays is at the rate of $61,431,775 a year. The amount of bonds on which the rate of interest has been reduced under the Windom plan is about $670,000,000.

A commercial paper of San Francisco, basing its estimates on advices received from all parts of the state, places the present crop of wheat in California rather more than twenty per cent. lower than that of last year. The surplus it places at nearly a million tons; but other authorities think it will not exceed eight hundred thousand.

All the leading stocks in the New York market have declined recently, some of them so much as to attract general attention. Many theories are advanced as to the cause of the decline, but probably the true one is that by artificial stimulus they had been pushed up too high.

Henry Ward Beecher will, in the next number of the North American Review, sum up the points made by Ingersoll and Black in their recent discussion in that publication, and add a general criticism of his own upon their respective views.

President Garfield snores. By this stertorous signal, which often continues long, his watchers know for certain that he is asleep. Often his snoring can be distinctly heard by persons in adjoining rooms.

Reports from the president continue to be of favorable character. But it can not yet be said that his recovery is assured.

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 30, 1881.

OREGONIAN AT THE RESORTS.—Parties can have the DAILY OREGONIAN sent to them at any of the seaside resorts, at $1 per month, on leaving their address at the business office of this paper.

CITY.

PRESENTED WITH A TRUMPET.—In the show window of Messrs. Henrichsen & Greenberg can be seen a solid silver trumpet of handsome design. This elegant and substantial gift is to be presented to Capt. Gerard Debney of the steamer "State," as a souvenir of that eventful voyage made to San Francisco at the time of the breaking of the propeller shaft. Several gentlemen passengers on that trip desiring to remember the commander for his gallant conduct on the trying occasion clubbed together and raised the sum required to have a fine trumpet made. This instrument was manufactured here by Henrichsen & Greenberg, and is a credit to all concerned. On one side appears the following appropriate inscription: "Presented to Capt. Gerard Debney by his friends on board during the memorable voyage of the steamship State of California, May 18 to May 29, 1881." On the reverse side are the names of the donors: Henry Ackerman, W. H. Wilson, Theo. F. Mansfield, T. T. Elas, F. F. [illegible], J. M. [illegible] Bosch, H. E. Simmons, H. H. [illegible], [illegible] Seckengiesser, H. Newman.

A PROMISING FIELD.—The P. C. Advocate says: "Our attention has been called to the fact that there is a promising field for missionary work in the form of a Sabbath school in South Portland. The city is growing rapidly in that direction, and with the improvements soon to be made by the O. R. & N. Co., will grow still more rapidly in the future. In a suitable locality there the church should procure lots sufficiently large for the requirements of the future and under able and energetic management organize a Sabbath school. Such work, however, should not be done in a fugitive manner, but by a well considered missionary and church extension plan, and under the supervision of and advice of a competent committee. We hope that at the first quarterly conference of this city after the annual conference, such a committee may be appointed and that the M. E. church of Portland will enter heartily into a systemized plan of church work that will keep us fully abreast of the growth of our population."

CONFIRMATION.—The Catholic Sentinel, in speaking of the confirmation of a class of boys and girls at St. Louis, Marion county, last Sunday, says: "At half-past ten o'clock a procession was formed in the churchyard, composed of the confirmants—22 boys and girls—followed by the clergy, Rev. Fathers Vermesch, Glorieux and Harthieb in surplices, and the Most Reverend Archbishop Seghers, his grace blessing the people who thronged near and received the same blessing. The procession entered the church followed by the people, and immediately after pontifical mass was celebrated by the archbishop, assisted by Fathers Vermesch and Harthieb. The choir sang a mass in chant, which sounded very solemn and beautiful. His grace the archbishop preached after the gospel an admirable discourse upon the lesson of the day, and also delivered a beautiful and instructive address to the confirmants before dispensing confirmation."

GEN. M. V. BROWN'S CONDITION.—The Albany Democrat says: Mart. V. Brown, former proprietor of this paper, is now at Lower Soda springs and is gradually wasting away with consumption. His left lung is now entirely useless and an abscess is forming in the right lung and when it breaks he will probably pass away. His time is very short for this world, and he is fully aware of his condition, but does not seem to dread the final end. His wife is nearly worn out with weary watching but feels very thankful to those kind friends who have given her assistance in this her hour of need.

EIGHT YEARS AMONG THE MORMONS.—Rev. W. M. Barrows, D. D., just elected secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, has spent the last eight years in Salt Lake City, where he built up a strong self-supporting church, and founded a promising academy and an extensive school system in Utah territory. He is to occupy Mr. Cruzan's pulpit to-morrow, and in the evening in his lecture on "The Evangelization of America," will give an inside view of Mormonism as he saw it. Dr. Barrows is a very able and eloquent speaker, and those who attend will be well repaid.

SENTENCES COMMUTED.—The governor has commuted the sentences of James Walters, sent from Multnomah county, July 3, 1877, for five years, for the crime of larceny. Reasons assigned, extra services performed while in prison. Also Robert Downer, sent for five years from March 4, 1879, from Multnomah county, for the crime of burglary. Commutation granted on petition of citizens of Multnomah county, and on condition that said Downer leave the state within five days and not return during the period for which he was sentenced.

NEW STEAMBOAT.—Capt. Chas. Bureau is completing his new steamer at the foot of E street. The hull was built at Albina, and the cabin is being constructed and the engine put in here. The boat is 110 feet long, with 22 feet beam. Her engine is of the latest improved pattern, having 12 inches bore and 5 feet stroke. It was made at Willamette Iron Works. When completed she will run on the Clatskanie and Lewis river trade.

BUCKEYE PICNIC.—The sons and daughters of the great state of Ohio will unite and give an excursion and basket picnic at Oregon City to-morrow. The steamer City of Quincy, and the Oregon City brass band have been engaged. The steamer will leave Morrison street dock, Portland, at 9:30 o'clock A. M. Fare, 75 cents for the round trip.

CONFIRMED.—Mr. P. M. Cochrane, director of the Oregonian Railway Company, and of the Oregon and Washington Bank, informs us that the statement as to the lease of the narrow gauge lines, published by us yesterday from a Dundee journal, is substantially correct. Mr. C. also informs us that his company will finish the extensions of the lines, as proposed.

THE LAST PERFORMANCE.—This evening the Lester English Opera Company will present—positively for the last time—the ever popular comic opera, "Girofle-Girofla." This will be the last opportunity afforded the public of witnessing this opera.

THE LURLINE.—This steamer will leave her wharf at the foot of Alder street this (Saturday) morning at 7:30 o'clock for Astoria and the seaside landing. The Lurline will leave Astoria for Portland Monday at 6:30 A. M.

BASE BALL MATCH.—The Star Base Ball Club of this city has accepted a challenge from the club at Oregon City to play a match on August 7th at that place, and will probably give an excursion on that date.

ANOTHER NAME.—The name of the man who stole a small sum of money from a barber shop, and was held to answer before the grand jury, is A. B. Fourney and not Fournier, as published.

PICNIC.—To-morrow the workmen will hold their picnic at Gambrinus Gardens, should the weather prove favorable. Good music will be in attendance, and strict order maintained.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE PERFORMANCE.—The second presentation of Girofle-Girofla last evening drew a fair audience. The performance was an improvement over the one of the previous evening, and seemed to be keenly enjoyed and appreciated by all present. The chorus was more prompt and effective than on the preceding evening, and the singing generally in better time. The "Drinking Song" by Miss Lester was warmly encored. The singing and acting of Mr. Nathal in the last act of the opera was well received and won deserved plaudits. The support was reasonably good.

MATINEE.—At 2 o'clock this afternoon a matinee performance will be given for the special accommodation of ladies and little folks. Girofle-Girofla, Lecocq's sparkling comic opera will be produced. Reserved seats can be had at Prentice's music store at the usual favorite prices.

A MYSTERY.—While making our usual rounds yesterday we accidently overheard a conversation between Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Clark at the corner of Stark and First streets and from their smiling countenances we judged that some happy event has taken place or is about to take place. An idea struck us that either a handsome pair of twins have made their appearance in their family circles or some old rich aunt "had gone where the woodbine twineth" leaving them a snug fortune to comfort them in their declining years. Prompted by that inquisitiveness to which reporters only are addicted, we took the liberty to interview them and from them learned that they intended to stay up all night in order to secure one of those elegant black gros grained silk dresses and other articles of equal value now offered by Messrs. H. Ackerman & Co., of the Dollar store for the paltry sum of one dollar. Their new scheme—adapted from the grand Magazine D'Espagne in Paris—will no doubt insure them an immense trade, and all those wishing to secure genuine bargains will do well to attend their grand reopening at 9 o'clock this (Saturday) morning.

THE ROMANCE OF BELLE BOYD.

The Story of a Female Spy of the Rebellion.

From the Philadelphia Record.

Sitting last evening on the porch of a comfortable residence in the extreme northwestern section of the city with a sweet little miss of three, another of seven summers playing hide and seek around her chair, was a lady who a score of years ago bore an international reputation. Few, if any, of those who knew her once would recognize in the handsome, well-preserved woman of commanding presence and highbred bearing, with a complexion like a rose and lily combined, a wealth of sunny, chestnut brown hair, a sweet, mobile mouth, and a face capable of most varying expression—the vivacious, daring girl who in war times had but one name, and that "Belle Boyd, the confederate spy."

The story of Belle Boyd's life reads like a romance. Born in Virginia of good old cavalier stock, she had barely graduated and made her debut in Washington society when the war commenced, and her father, with several others of her kindred, took up arms in the confederate cause. When Gen. Robert Patterson with his troops entered Martinsburg, her native place, she was acting the part of the ministering angel to the wounded in the improvised hospital. While engaged in these duties many scraps of information concerning the movements of the federal army came to her ears, and thus it was that, with an impulsiveness and ardor due largely to her youth, she entered upon the task with which her name became so prominently identified. Several ladies of the place, who had also been picking up scraps of news, held a meeting at her house, the items were bunched together, put upon paper and the document placed in the hands of a trusty colored servant for transmission to Gen. Jackson. This went on safely for some time, until one day the messenger was captured by the federal pickets and compelled to disclose his mission. Thereupon "Belle Boyd" was arrested, taken before Gen. Robert Patterson, enlightened as to the nature and penalties of the articles of war, and finally placed under espionage during the remainder of the general's stay in town.

From this time onward she devoted herself to the task of furnishing information to the supporters of the Lost Cause. Scores of times she was placed under temporary arrest, and on two occasions she was incarcerated for months in the Old Capitol and Carroll prisons at Washington. Oftentimes she was found in the middle of the hottest fights, but, although on many occasions her clothing was literally riddled with bullets, she invariably escaped personal injury. It is related of her that on one occasion, when taken prisoner, she was taken before Gen. Butler, at Fortress Monroe. Observing her agitation, Ben remarked:

"Pray be seated. But why do you tremble so. Are you frightened?"

"No, ah—that is, yes, Gen. Butler, I must acknowledge that I do feel frightened in the presence of a man of such worldwide reputation as yourself," was her reply.

"What do you mean?" remarked the general, as he rubbed his hands together and smiled benignly.

"I mean, Gen. Butler," she replied, "that you are a man whose atrocious conduct and brutality, especially to Southern ladies, is so infamous that even the British Parliament commented upon it. I naturally feel alarmed at being in your presence."

With rage depicted upon every lineament of his features, the general arose from the table and ordered her to be taken from the room.

During her residence in Washington, "Belle Boyd" formed an intimate acquaintance with President Lincoln, and a friendly correspondence was kept up between the two during the greater portion of the war. On one occasion her letter paper was adorned with the confederate motto, a snake entwined around a confederate flag, and the inscription, "Don't tread on us or we will bite." When Lincoln replied to the missive, he sent back the motto with "bite" erased and the word "bust" substituted.

Broken down in health and bereaved by the loss of her father, who had died in the endeavor to effect her release from captivity, "Belle Boyd" determined to leave for foreign shores, and in May, 1864, she embarked on the Greyhound at North Carolina as the bearer of important dispatches from Jefferson Davis and Judah P. Benjamin to the friends of the cause in London. In endeavoring to run the blockade, however, the Greyhound was captured by a United States steamer. Belle Boyd was taken to Boston, kept a prisoner for some time, and finally banished to Canada. From there she went to England, where she passed the second epoch of her life. She was married at the aristocratic church of St. James, Piccadilly, received with open arms in titled society, became a widow, and finally, having a natural talent for the theatrical profession, took to the stage.

Probably no person in the country has been afflicted with so many "troubles" as this lady. Since her return to America and marriage to Col. J. S. Hammond, an English gentleman, once a member of the noted "Louisiana Tigers," she completely sunk her identity with that of her husband, and with the exception of a few occasions, when she has appeared upon the platform as the talented reader and elocutionist "Maria Isabelle Hammond," her mind has been engrossed with domestic affairs. Yet every few months she is vexed and annoyed by coming across an announcement that "Belle Boyd," the ex-confederate spy, has turned up in some part of the country. Now the pretender is being entertained by some prominent Southerner, again she is in distress and soliciting aid. Several years ago one of the bogus "Belles" visited Atlanta on a lecturing tour, and was denounced by Capt. St. Clair Abrams, of the News, as an impostor. Next morning she proceeded to the office and demanded satisfaction, which, being refused, she proceeded to draw a couple of Derringers, but was seized before the weapons could be pointed. Since that time she has not turned up in Georgia. The latest pretender turned up in Waxahachie a few weeks ago under the name of Mrs. Murphy, and according to the Enterprise of that place, was engaged in writing a history of her life, but a brief and pointed epistle to a prominent citizen of that place has probably by this time put a quietus on her pretensions. As long ago as 1876 the Masons of Martinsburg, Ga., found it necessary to send a circular to the craft all over the country, warning them against persons pretending to be the daughter of their deceased brother, B. R. Boyd, Esq. The genuine "Belle Boyd" has just completed a play, which is highly spoken of, and contemplates making her debut upon the stage in this city in the coming autumn.

AN INVINCIBLE NAVY.

[New York Times, July 15th.]

As everybody knows, we have no navy worth speaking of. We have a collection of ironclads that cannot go to sea, and that would be of no use, on account of the thinness of their armor, even if they could be trusted off soundings. We have also a collection of wooden steamers, which, if carefully preserved in our navy yards, might be useful as hospital and receiving ships; but which are not much more formidable, regarded as fighting ships, than are the Brooklyn ferry-boats. This assortment of old iron and marine bric-a-brac may be interesting to the archæologist, but it certainly does not deserve to be called a navy. Of course, we ought to have a navy, for men-of-war are necessary for the protection of the commerce of a nation and for defending its soil from hostile attacks. To be sure, we have no commerce to protect, but then we are liable to be invaded by Sioux Indians or to find ourselves at war with the Mormons, and in such emergencies a navy would naturally be of immense service to us. In order to have a navy we must build men-of-war, for patriotism forbids us to go to a foreign junk shop and fit ourselves with a ready-made navy. In order to have any commerce for the navy to protect we must also build merchant ships. In a moment of happy inspiration, Mr. John Roach has discovered how to provide this country with an interconvertible navy, the vessels of which shall be merchant steamers in time of peace and ironclads in time of war. His motto seems to be, "Every merchant steamer its own man-of-war," and there is no doubt that it is an excellent and ingenious motto. Mr. Roach's plan for an interconvertible navy, as set forth in the North American Review, is as follows: He proposes that some American ship-builder be employed to build one hundred steamers, of various sizes, to be used as merchant vessels. He has not the least idea what ship-builder should have this nice little job, but it is probable that were he urged to recommend a man who would be willing to build

A HUNDRED IRON STEAMSHIPS

At his own price, he could, in time, find out a builder whom he could confidently recommend. These steamers would constitute a merchant fleet of very respectable dimensions, and if properly subsidized with postal contracts, as liberal as those which have made the "star routes" famous, they could manage to secure a fair share of the trade between here and Europe. As soon as the next war breaks out, Mr. Roach would have these ships provided with armor and armed with rifled guns. They would thus become men-of-war, and in that character could protect themselves, regarded in the light of merchant vessels, from the depredations of the enemy. The only fault which the most captious critic could find with this scheme would be in connection with the method of converting the merchant steamers into ironclads. There would, however, be no real difficulty in the matter. Mr. Roach would have every steamer provided with a suit of armor, just as every man is provided with an overcoat. In time of peace this armor would be laid away in a locker and sprinkled with camphor so as to keep it free from moths. Should war break out at any time, either in the day or in the night, the officer of the deck would send a quartermaster down below with orders to bring up the ship's armor and put it in position. Thus, say in ten or fifteen minutes, the ship would be converted into an ironclad which could defy the enemy's shot. At the same time the steward would be told to bring up a basketful of rifled cannon, which would be mounted and made ready for action, so that before the enemy could recover from his surprise at seeing a peaceful merchant vessel changed into a man-of-war, he would receive a broadside and sink amid the astonished exclamations of his disappointed and dissatisfied crew. Furthermore, Mr. Roach does not intend that his interconvertible ships should be

DEFENDED ONLY BY IRON PLATES.

He proposes to have them carry all their coal in bunkers formed between the inner and outer skins of the vessel. Thus the engines will be protected by, say, thirty six inches of iron armor and six inches of coal. Of course, if the steamers thus protected were to burn their coal, they would use up part of their armor, but we may suppose that their captains would have sense enough to leave their coal untouched and to use kerosene or spirit lamps for the purpose of making steam. Admirable as Mr. Roach's interconvertible navy would be, it might be improved. Has he thought of the plan of supplying his merchant steamers with hydrogen gas wherewith to convert them, not into floating batteries, but into balloons? What would be the surprise and indignation of a hostile frigate were the American merchant steamer selected as its prey to suddenly rise in the air to the height of a quarter of a mile, and then to drop cannon balls, cold potatoes, and other missiles upon its helpless adversary! What an enormous advantage a steamer would have which at any moment could soar into the air and cross the continent from New York to New Orleans without making the tedious and dangerous voyage around the Florida Cape! Mr. Roach should give this idea his careful consideration, and he will hardly fail to see its merits and to modify his interconvertible ships in accordance with it.

LITERARY NOTES.

The largest sale of any recent book seems to have been reached by Mr. Spurgeon's John Ploughman's Talk, which is set down at 350,000 copies, which we take to be considerably more than the sale of Piers Plowman's Vision.

Mr. A. R. Spofford, the librarian of congress, is shortly to publish a library of choice literature, which is announced to include every standard author from Homer to Longfellow. We are not told its bulk, but we fancy it will be very voluminous.

The memoirs of Barras must be very full if it be true as is stated, that they are about to be published in eight volumes. They are expected to throw light on the history of the Terror and the Directory, concerning which they ought to be an Ultima ratio de richesse.

Mr. Stedman's first essay on "Poetry in America"—a subject too little treated by American critics—will appear in the August Scribner. It is part of the new work projected by Mr. Stedman on the "Poets and Poetry of America," and treats of the relations of the art of versification to American life and history.

The manuscripts of Lord Beaconsfield which were disposed of at the sale of his personal effects on the 15th, realized extraordinary prices. They were nothing to look at, however curious they may have been in themselves, for they were written mostly on folio paper, on both sides, in a clear, bold hand, and were simply wrapped up in brown paper parcels. They were probably the first drafts which were transcribed for the printer.

PRESS SAYINGS.

"Are you the mate of this ship?" said a newly arrived passenger to the cook. "No, sir, I am the man that cooks the mate," said the Hibernian.—Nantucket Gazette.

Diogenes requested Alexander the Great to get out of his sunshine. This, however, did not occur when the thermometer in Diogenes's tub was singing 101.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The greatest humorist America has yet produced is blissfully unaware of the fact.—New York News. Well, we're glad this is settled, even if we're not the man.—McGregor (Iowa) News.

The boast is made that a Boston girl is so sensibly attired that she ran at high speed run two blocks after a horse car without awkwardness or getting red in the face. The conductor watches her as she approaches but does not stop the car.—New York Herald.

The experiments at cooling the president's sick-room have cost $12,000. If Mr. Charles Francis Adams had been in Washington at the time of the attempted assassination, and called at the White House once a day, all this money might have been saved.—Chicago Tribune.

Arthur's Nationality.

[From the Troy Times.]

Our Amsterdam correspondent puts a quietus on the story that Vice-President Arthur was born in Canada. He says: The Rev. Reuben Winegar, of Port Jackson, told your correspondent yesterday that in 1831 he and his wife visited Fairfield, Vt., and were guests of the Rev. Mr. Arthur, the father of Vice-President Arthur, and while there Mr. Winegar held young Arthur, then a child six months of age, in his arms. When asked whether the vice-president was not born in Canada, Mr. Winegar replied, "No, sir; he was born in Fairfield, Franklin county, Vermont, where his father was stationed as a Baptist minister." Mr. Winegar is a Baptist minister 75 years of age, and says he had been acquainted with Mr. Arthur, Sr., since 1828.

A United North and South.

[From the Memphis Avalanche, Ind. Dem.]

For the first time since the close of the war, the northern press expresses the unanimous conviction that the south is restored to loyalty and devotion to the union. The spontaneity of the southern outburst of grief on account of the attempted assassination of the president, the depth and sincerity of this manifestation, has taught the people of the north that everywhere the American people are one in sympathy feeling and devotion to the interests of the country. This incident will be likely to do away with the oft-repeated growls of extreme men, north and south. In the hour of the nation's peril there was no thought of section. The people thought only of the nation.

English Sympathy.

LONDON, July 26.—The Standard, in an editorial, says: In England every incident since President Garfield's illness is watched with keen but mournful interest. Had he been a British statesman it would have been hardly possible for the English people to have manifested a truer sentiment of sympathy than that which they have extended to his family and country. In no part of the United States will news that Garfield is out of danger be more joyfully received than in England. In no part of the union will tidings of his death, should that melancholy event occur, excite a deeper or more genuine feeling of sorrow than it would produce throughout her majesty's English-speaking dominions.

Drover Drowned.

Thomas McKinney, a drover, was drowned at Missoula Ferry, Montana, on Monday afternoon while trying to swim some horses across the river. His body has not been recovered, although every effort has been made to find it. The above is probably a young man who was brought up in Washington county and lived there until a few years ago.

A New "Ohio Idea."

[Cincinnati Gazette.]

The governor of Ohio ought to be clothed with the veto power; he ought to have a salary of $5000 a year, and a house to live in, and his term of office ought to be four years instead of two. Ohio has got to be a big state. It contains more people than the United States had 100 years ago.

DR. PAUL M BRENAN,

ALL CHRONIC & DIFFICULT DISEASES,

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE any form of Disease of the generative organs or private disease. He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the

such as SPERMATORRHEA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted; their organizations broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, and death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.

Office—132 and 134 Third St., opposite Masonic Hall. Office Hours—From 10 to 12 A. M., 2 to 5 and 7 to 8 P. M. All letters of professional business must be addressed DR. PAUL M. BRENAN & CO., Portland, Oregon.

FOURTH ANNUAL VICTORY

For D. M. Osborne & Co. Harvesting Machinery at the Oregon State Fair for 1881.

SALEM, OR., July 11, 1881.

This certifies that D. M. Osborne & Co. was awarded first premiums on their Twine Binding Harvester, No. Six Combined Reaper and Mower, No. Three Independent Reaper, No. Two Front Cut Mower, and No. Five Rear Cut Mower at the Fair of 1881.

E. M. WAITE, Sec'y.

The above speaks for itself. The competition was between the Osborne and Woods Twine Binders. The McCormick and Marsh Deering acknowledged defeat, and did not enter for premiums; but found time to exhibit on the Fair Grounds, but attracted no attention whatever. The Osborne was put to a very severe test, cutting and binding green wheat, successfully repeating the operation, and the committee expressed perfect satisfaction. The defeat of the Woods binder was rough and hard to bear, but the following from Mr. H. A. Davis, of Harrisburg, Linn county, Oregon, is a much grander victory for the "Osborne:"

HARRISBURG, OR., July 9, 1881.

Messrs. D. M. Osborne & Co., Portland, Or.: Gentlemen: After two days' hard labor and extreme vexation with a "Woods Twine Binder," having the assistance of an expert, I have failed to make it go. To-day I concluded to try an Osborne, and am happy to say that from the first entrance into the grain up to this writing it has not failed for one moment to do perfect work, cutting, binding and elevating. And before this reaches you my order will be filled with one of your machines, as I consider them the best and only machine on which we farmers can fully depend. My men will all cheerfully sign with me as true friends to the Osborne.
